FOREWORD

The inception of the project, bearing its first mature fruit in the publication to which this is a foreword, came at the 1932 conference of the Pennsylvania Library Association. Dr. C. Seymour Thompson, Librarian of the University of Pennsylvania, announced that the American Library Association had started a movement to preserve the basic source materials for the social sciences in the various states, a development of the project launched by the Social Service Science Research Council, in cooperation with the Bibliographical Society of America. Dr. A. F. Kuhlman, Chairman of the American Library Association Committee, stated that one of the most important needs would be a bibliography of newspapers published in the various states, since the checklist made for the American Antiquarian Society by Dr. Clarence Brigham listed only American newspapers prior to 1820.

The Pennsylvania Historical Commission decided in May, 1933, to undertake this desirable and constructive piece of work for Pennsylvania. The plan would make available the newspaper holdings in Pennsylvania, indispensable for historical research, by a checklist of all files of newspapers, both local and state wide.

The list prepared by Doctor Brigham covers thoroughly the period up to 1820. The only other checklists available, apparently, were those published by Yale University, containing very few Pennsylvania items; the Library of Congress checklist with only a short Pennsylvania list, and the Pennsylvania State Library list of 1900 which contains only items held by the State Library. This last is a very valuable list but incomplete for the whole state.

The correspondence with Doctor Kuhlman disclosed the plan of the Bibliographical Society of America, to work through the different states on the local files. Some state lists were then complete and ready for publication. At that time the Bibliographical Society was doing nothing in the eastern part of Pennsylvania and the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania was listing only Western Pennsylvania items, except for a survey of Allegheny County, which was complete.

In view of the above facts, the Historical Commission project was outlined to secure data from existing newspapers and from institutions and individuals on their holdings. The information received was typed on cards under each newspaper. By June, 1934, returns had been received from approximately 70 percent of these sources. In the meantime, the American Bibliographical Society had developed their project into a definite Union List of Newspapers in the libraries of the United States and Canada, under the editorship of Miss Winifred Gregory, the work to be done in the Library of Congress. The Historical Commission immediately got in touch with Miss Gregory, who suggested that the Historical Commission take charge of the work, under direction of the Union List of Newspapers.

About this time, the State Library's project of an historical survey of the entire Commonwealth under Dr. C. W. Garrison, the archivist, was begun, which grew and developed far beyond the vision of its originators. The first project closed, another took up the work, and was followed by others, until it was finished in 1936, and submitted to Miss Gregory. Since then, the successive heads of the Historical Survey have recognized the necessity of making the work as complete as possible, in order to make available to students of Pennsylvania history, the invaluable information in the local newspapers on the growth and history of municipalities, daily events, and contemporary thought. Such a guide, to give the research worker, whether historical, political, economic or social, the information there contained, would be a credit to the organization preparing it.

Great credit is due the Historical Survey for the fruition of their undertaking as exemplified in the first volume of so magnificent a work.

FRANCES DORRANCE,
Pennsylvania Historical Commission.

PREFACE

Thirty-eight years after Charles II granted the Province of Pennsylvania to William Penn, the first newspaper was established. The American Weekly Mercury made its appearance on December 22, 1719. This was the third newspaper established on the British-American Continent, the Boston News-Letter having been published in 1704. The second newspaper, the Boston Gazette, preceded the first Pennsylvania paper by one day—December 21, 1719.

During the period 1704-1775, approximately seventy-eight newspapers were published in the American colonies, of which more than half had been discontinued previous to the outbreak of the American Revolution. At the end of January, 1775, nine newspapers were published in Pennsylvania, more than in any other colony. Massachusetts followed, with seven, Connecticut and New York had four, and South Carolina three, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Rhode Island possessed two each, while only one was published in New Hampshire and Georgia.

Of the nine newspapers published in Pennsylvania in 1775, seven were published in Philadelphia, six in English and one in German. Another German paper was published in Germantown, and the remaining one, published in Lancaster, was in English and German.

The spread of newspaper publications in the English language throughout the Commonwealth during the period 1776-1810 was irregular. Newspapers were established in Carlisle in 1785, at Pittsburgh in 1786, and at York in 1787. During the 1790's, fourteen made their appearance. Beginning at Chambersburg in 1790, Harrisburg followed in 1792, Mifflintown and West Chester in 1794, Uniontown and Washington in 1795, Reading, Wilkes-Barre and Lewistown in 1796, Huntingdon in 1797, and Bristol, Easton, Greensborough and Norristown in 1799. The year 1806 saw their establishment at Doylestown and Gettysburg. Williamsport followed in 1802, Bedford and Meadville in 1805, Beavertown in 1807, Allentown, Downingtown and Erie in 1808. A newspaper was first published at Brownsville in 1809 and at Frankford in 1810.

The large influx of German immigrants was accompanied by the establishment of a large number of newspapers which played an important role in the growth and development of the colony. For a short period, Benjamin Franklin published the Philadelphische Zeitung in 1731. Christopher Sower, one of the best known German publishers, founded the Hoch Deutsch, Pennsylvanische Geschicht-Schreiber in 1739. By the close of the century, five others had been published in the vicinity of Philadelphia at one time or another. Seven more were published at Ephrata, Lancaster, Reading, Easton, Harrisburg, York, and Hanover, during the same period. Four additional German newspapers were established during the first decade of the next century at Norristown, Somerset, Lebanon and Allentown.

French newspapers in the American colonies were unknown until after the American Revolution. One was published in Philadelphia in the 1780's and three during the 1790's, although they were short-lived and few issues survive today.

In 1800, there were one hundred and fifty newspapers in the United States. There was a marked increase in the next decade, three hundred and sixty-six being published in 1810. Pennsylvania outranked all other States at this time, with seventy-three.

The nineteenth century was an age of rugged individualism, and in no place can this be seen more plainly than in the newspaper field. The same century that saw the small merchant and individual proprietor also saw the individual newspaper publisher. The peak in Philadelphia was reached during the decade 1870-1880, one hundred and five being established during that period. Thereafter, the number of new newspapers waned. The era of combinations in big business has also been reflected in the newspaper field. The influence of the individual publisher over American life has greatly diminished.

The titles of the newspapers have been arranged genealogically, the latest title of any newspaper being entered alphabetically as to the main title, with the date span covering the entire length of the sequence. The frequency, and any political, religious, foreign, or other known affiliation follow. Under the latest title, all titles have been arranged chronologically, with their respective date spans, frequencies, and abbreviations. Any variations in title have also been shown. Each prior title has been cross-indexed alphabetically, in order to indicate its location in the proper sequence. Cross-references that would immediately precede or follow a title are omitted. Publishers and editors are listed under each prior title, followed by the depository symbols and holdings. Only Pennsylvania holdings have been listed. An asterisk beside any title indicates that out-state holdings may be found by consulting Winifred Gregory's American Newspapers, 1821-1936. The number sign beside any title indicates that out-state holdings may be located by consulting Clarence M. Brigham's Bibliography of American Newspapers, 1690-1820.

Few volumes arranged in this manner have been presented. The period of Pennsylvania's newspaper history, through 1820, has been thoroughly covered by Mr. Brigham. From that date until the establishment of George P. Rowell's American Newspaper Directory, in 1869, a period which may well be called "The Dark Ages," ensued. During this period, the surviving newspaper files are the only evidence as to the number of papers that were published in approximately five decades. Every effort has been made to discover newspapers published during this period, but in the absence of an annual newspaper directory, there is always the possibility that some have not been located.

Where conditions permitted, a personal check of the newspaper files in any depository was productive of much information. When a personal check has been made, the symbol ♦ has been placed between the depository symbol and the holding. In all cases in which a personal check was not made, the information was supplied by the individual depository. This checklist provides a tool with which collections in depositories can be profitably checked.

The first Philadelphia Newspaper Checklist, published in 1937, contained 331 newspaper titles. Additional research, including all titles listed in Rowell or Ayer, American Newspaper Annual, 1880-1908, American Newspaper Annual and Directory, 1909-1929, Directory of Newspapers and Periodicals, 1930-1941, has resulted in the increase in this number to more than 700 newspaper titles. More than 340 of the newspaper titles which are listed have no known Pennsylvania holdings. For purposes of convenience, those with Pennsylvania holdings and those without these holdings have all been grouped together alphabetically, in order to avoid the necessity of referring to more than one list of newspapers.

In several instances, it has been difficult to determine the line of demarkation between newspapers and magazines, particularly those which are of a religious nature. The early publications of various denominations frequently contained news, vital statistics, commercial advertising, and general as well as secular news. Although in recent years they have nearly all developed into religious magazines, they have been included. Copies of all of these publications have not been found.

The volume herewith presented covers all known newspapers which have been published in the area that is now Philadelphia since 1719, including the former villages of Germantown and Frankford. A second volume, which includes the counties constituting the western part of Pennsylvania, is now in preparation. Under the present Pittsburgh will be found grouped the former divisions such as Allegheny; also, some of the contiguous boroughs. The remainder of the State will be published subsequently.

It is to be hoped that unknown files will eventually find their way into the numerous public depositories, thus reducing the number of newspapers listed which have no known Pennsylvania holdings. It should also arouse greater interest in the preservation of newspapers, which constitute such a valuable historical source. Pennsylvania is more fortunate than many States in the wealth of her newspaper files, especially in the early period.

It is to be hoped that eventually the majority of the newspapers in all of the depositories will be microfilmed, for the sake of preservation. Due to their frail character, many existing files are in a bad state of deterioration, particularly during the period following the Civil War, when the supply of rag paper was insufficient, and first esparto, and later wood pulp came into use.

The cooperation of all those who have made this volume possible is gratefully acknowledged. Particular thanks should go to Mr. Franklin

Price, of the Free Library of Philadelphia, N. W. Ayer & Sons, and all the depositories listed in this volume.

Copies of the Checklist of Pennsylvania Newspapers, Philadelphia, are published for distribution to important libraries in Pennsylvania and to a limited number of libraries and Government depositories outside the State. Requests for information regarding any of the former activities of the Survey should be addressed to the Pennsylvania Historical Commission.

State Supervisor.

NOTE: The issue of July 8, 1869, bears a note that The Banner merged in The American Presbyterian. There was no issue of the Banner of the Covenant on July 15, 1869, The American Presbyterian taking its place on that day. From July 22, 1869, until Feb. 17, 1870, the Banner of the Covenant again appeared. Apparently the above merger was never effected.

On Feb. 24, 1870—together with The American Presbyterian—it merged with the New York Evangelist (the latter however, mentions only The American Presbyterian).

Beginning Aug. 15, 1841, this paper states that it is the official organ of communication of the Bishops of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and North Carolina, with their respective dioceses; from June 4, 1842, Maryland is added; from Apr. 29, 1843, Michigan also appears; on Nov. 2, 1844, Pennsylvania is dropped.

About Aug. 1848 the above statement is discontinued altogether.
